Re: Monthly Police Report for August 2013

This is more of a touch base with you report rather than my usual report. Not a whole lot has changed since my last update. Last Tuesday I spent the day at the hospital getting examined etc..the doctor feels my leg is healing and unless something changes he sees no need for any additional surgery, screws, plates, etc..just the common sense approach to let it heal at its on pace. I have another exam in about 7 weeks and that will continue for about the next 4 months. I'm not able to take any calls in uniform, I can, and have, been doing desk work every day. I can do a lot of it from my house and have been getting to our office more and more each day.

I'm staying in contact with Pete regarding some past and future projects that we had been working on prior to my injury. I also deal with the daily activity of the officers but am trying to turn some of those duties over to Bill. If you recall, the overall game plan was to teach Bill how to deal with some of the administrative duties which I have. Unfortunately, I expected to be doing it in our office and spending more time at it but that has obviously changed.

My letter regarding my retirement that I wrote a couple months ago still holds true. The time line may have changed a little due to my not getting the opportunity to spend the time necessary it takes to teach someone the responsibilities and requirements that come with the job but I think we are on the right track for a smooth transition. I will monitor it closely and keep Pete updated if I see any glitches on the radar.

Other than that, the police have been very busy as every summer but nothing they can't handle. Everyone in our department are looking forward for things to slow down, which should start happening sometime after applefest. If there's any questions/concerns any of you have, please feel free to relay them through Pete or contact me directly.

Sincerely,

Michael Anderson
